This resume was written for someone who wanted to re-enter the workforce after an extended personal sabbatical and transition into a new career.

He'd previously accomplished great things in his rather specialized role as a Property Management Executive but then sold his business and moved to San Diego. There his time was spent putzing around and building his new custom home. While landscaping his home he got to know the landscaper pretty well and did some business consulting for him. My client's advice improved the landscaper's marketing efforts resulting in increased sales revenue and overall productivity.

My goal was to position him as a senior level executive within any field or industry.
